“By believing passionately in something that still does not exist, we create it. The nonexistent is whatever we have not sufficiently desired.”

NIKOS KAZANTZAKIS

Ted Elias had traveled a lengthy journey since his impoverished childhood in the housing projects of Utica, New York — a very long way indeed. “It is not every day that a billionaire asks you to come visit him,” said Ted, now aged fifty-two, as his passenger plane lifted off from a Florida runway and turned toward its destination in Ohio. Elias knew that the man he was flying to meet, the ninety-one-year-old tycoon who had asked to see him, was an interesting character. “A billionaire,” thought Ted. A multi-millionaire himself, Ted wondered how they’d get along.

His host’s name was Ralph Stolle. While few individuals outside of Ohio knew his name, one of the products Stolle had developed was a part of daily life in America. At almost the very moment Elias was thinking that, the flight attendant handed him a soda. He pulled back the tab and heard the familiar “fzzz-chnnk” sound as it opened. Ralph Stolle was the father of the ‘pop-top’ can. Every time anybody anywhere did what he just did — and billions did it every year — Stolle earned a royalty. Well, if nothing else, one thing the two men would have in common was their appreciation for residual income.

A magazine story on Ted Elias provides some insight. A picture with the article shows him sitting at the wheel of his custom-made Zimmer Golden Spirit, a metallic silver car with a huge 24-karat gold eagle on its hood. This massive automobile occupied space in the garage of his Boca Raton mansion along with assorted other exotic cars ranging from Porsches to Ferraris. Ted's company was then pulling in annual revenues of close to one billion dollars, partly through real estate transactions and yacht sales.

But land and boats were not the only basis of Ted's wealth — the foundation of his fortune had been laid twenty years earlier when he was one of the top network marketers in the world. "Come back and see us when you're driving your Cadillac," someone shouted at Ted Elias as he walked out the factory door for the last time, aged just twenty-five. "Ha, ha, ha!" they all laughed. It was loud, scornful, mocking laughter. "Come back when you're a millionaire. Ha, ha, ha, ha!" Well, Elias became one of the youngest, fastest-growing distributors in the history of network marketing, and was able to retire as a multi-millionaire after just seven years in the business.

Ted Elias had found his host at that first meeting in Ohio to be "very cordial, and bright, and interesting. I was quite taken with him. He was a wise old man." Even up until his nineties, Ralph Stolle had continued to be vigorous and active. People who saw him at work talked with wonderment about his legendary energy. One man recalled spending a whole day with him in meetings: "At the end of the day, I was pretty much exhausted. He was still pumping." Though ninety-one-years-old, Stolle was running twenty-five companies, working fourteen hours a day, and loving every minute of it.

The major success-characteristic both Ralph Stolle and Ted Elias possessed in immense quantities was their phenomenal passion for what they believed in. Here were two men from completely different backgrounds involved with entirely different businesses, yet they both became extraordinarily successful. Another prosperity-trait these men shared was they were humanitarians — they both wanted to improve the quality of life for millions of people. Though Ralph Stolle was a billionaire, people said that right up until the time of his death, he still wanted to get his products into the hands of the public. He traveled the world and ran his companies as if he were a nonstop dynamo, passionately extolling the benefits of his products.⁵

Living Is Giving

Though passion is one of the major driving forces behind all successful people, the ultimate expression of an Empowered Millionaire is found in the development of a generous heart, as illustrated by the humanitarian efforts of Ted Elias and Ralph Stolle. Perfect generosity is the willingness to give all that has been manifested without the expectation of any return. It may be seen as paradoxical that this final module of a program on manifesting financial abundance should advocate generously sharing what is received. However, if the spiritual wisdom of the ages is reviewed, it shall be found that this principle is consistent with what the enlightened masters have taught throughout the millennia.

EMPOWERED MILLIONAIRE INSIGHT

*One man gives freely, yet grows all the richer;
another withholds what he should give,
and only suffers want.*

PROVERBS II-24

Manifestation is a consequence of connecting with the universal source, which is infinite and abundant in its supply. It has been said that living is giving and giving is living. What this means is: The more I live, the more I can give — and the more I give, the more I can live. It needs to be asked here, what comes first, the chicken or the egg — or in this case, the living fully or the giving wholeheartedly? Well, in this chapter, living fully shall be discussed first.

The great author, Jonathan Swift, once wrote, “May you live all the days of your life.” Now, I need to ask myself if I am really living life fully or if I am just going through the motions? If for whatever reasons I am not living all the days of my life, I must become more passionate. Passion is the key to unlock the treasure chest of riches that is my existence. With passion as my ally, I can unleash a tsunami of exuberance the likes of which I have never experienced before. From today, I shall develop an unquenchable passion for living each moment of my existence with a love for life that borders on insanity.

Yes, from this day forward, my life shall come alive because I choose to live each moment with a voracious appetite to experience everything. Having a passion for life means living every day with an unquenchable thirst to drink each drop offered. And it means utilizing the vocabulary of a passionate person. To begin, here are some excellent synonyms of the word ‘life’ that I should build into my daily communications: élan, energy, enthusiasm, exuberance, liveliness, soul, sparkle, spirit, sprightliness, vigor, vitality, vivacity and zest. Yes, enthusiastically expressed, these words make me want to jump into life with added excitement and increased gusto!

I will expect miracles to happen to me every day because I am a living, breathing miracle in my own right. I will be a force for good in my life by sharing my love, sharing my gifts, sharing my hope, and sharing my enthusiasm for living. I will celebrate my passion for life by being optimistic and cheerful, by looking for the best in others, by being happy and joyous, and by rising to every occasion. I do not intend getting to the end of my life and finding that I have only lived one half of it. I will rejoice and revel in life now and avoid going to my grave with my music still inside me. From this day forward, I will live with passion in my heart and a smile on my face.

This is one command that I will now live by: I will live my life to the maximum! From this day forward, I shall experience all I can with energy and vigor and added dimension for every moment. I set the pace, so I will dance through life with flamboyance and exuberance.

I shall have more fun, go a little crazy, choose adventure and always be willing to try new things. I shall take this opportunity to learn from my trials and tribulations, find the cause of my fears and eliminate them with action. I shall not try to be perfect. Instead, I will be an example of a person living life fully knowing that every moment of my life is a blessing and a joy. I shall have an attitude of positive expectancy knowing that everything benefits me in some way. I will never stop growing and learning, I will never stop smiling and being enthusiastic, and I will never stop loving life.

I Shall Live With Passion In My Heart

Studies have shown that lifestyle plays a vital role in determining how long someone lives. Further research suggests it also helps to have sufficient money, a friendly personality and loving relationships with family and friends. But the essential factor was proven to be in a person's attitude to living a long, happy, fun filled life to the fullest. Attitude is the key principle. Madame Jeanne Calment, one of the world's longest-lived people, having enjoyed living into her 120s, echoed this magnificently when she said: "Life is all about having fun. If you are not having fun and making the best of things, then what is the point of being here in the first place?"

Why is it that some people seem to naturally live life to the full, and why do they seem to produce such seemingly outrageous results with their lives? Why is it that some people appear to enjoy such happy and cheerful times, and why do they seem so successful and prosperous? What makes their lives so exciting and adventurous, and why do they display such radiant and abundant health? Why do they have such harmonious relationships and live lives of splendor and magnificence? Is it because these people are born lucky or have all manner of good things showered upon them? No, the real reason is because these people build so much into their lives, giving their all, enjoying every moment, committing one hundred percent effort to experiencing the joy that a full and rewarding life can bring. They live with passion in their heart — and so can I.

The Empowered Millionaire Philosophy is based on this premise of committing one hundred percent effort to living a passionate life. This S2 course is packed full of dynamic and inspiring principles for me to use in getting to the very pinnacle of my existence. It contains innumerable powerful and motivational procedures to show me how to experience the joy of living my life to the maximum. Whatever I desire — whether I want to be healthy and wealthy, confident and dynamic, powerful and influential, sophisticated and cultured, successful and rich, fulfilled and happy — I need to become a serious student of life and I need to become committed to achieving the maximum with my own life too.

THE SUMMIT

See not the small trials and vexations of each hour of the day. See the one purpose and plan to which all are leading. If in climbing a mountain you keep your eyes on each stony or difficult place, as you ascend, seeing only that, how weary and profitless your climb. But if you think of each step as leading to the summit of achievement, from which glories and beauties will open out before you, then your climb will be so different.

I have a choice! I can take the high road to success and prosperity by choosing to be radiantly alive, experiencing the glory of a full life in all its brilliance, or I can take the low road to mediocrity. It is my decision. I can choose joy over despair, happiness over tears and great health over ill health. I can choose action over indecision, growth over stagnation and companionship over loneliness. I can choose power over fear and love over anger. I can choose to laugh at life and I will find the world laughing hand in hand with me. I can choose to have a superabundance of all the good things life has to offer, they are all available — all the love and laughter, all the joy and happiness, all the comfort and success, and all the health, wealth, wisdom and fulfillment I could possibly desire. These are all available for me now.
